and love of this stood before him. The helpless has mot the Helper.

INSTANT CURE.—(Verses 8, 9, 11 was necessary to arouse this man. Blessings are not thrust unconditionally upon any. Genuine desire must precede any bestowment (Mark xi:24), else it may become a burden and a curse. This man in his long waiting may have sunk so low mentally that real life would have no significance to him. Hance, the question of Jesus, "Wilt thou be, made whole" Would you like to exchange sicknoss for health with all that means, laying aside your dependence and beggary to take your place among men and nadress yourself to the stern duties of life? Are you willing to carn your living rather than to receive it as a gift? Is there something in life that attracts you so that you desire strength for its attainment? The man's reply showed the limit of his faith which centered wholly in the water. He had no friend to help him into the health-giving pool. This was cough, Jesus said, "Rise and walk," and im-

you desire strength for its attainment? The man's reply showed the limit of his faith which centered whoily in the water. He had no friend to help him into the health-giving pool. This was conugh. Jesus said, "Rise and walk," and immediately he obeyed.

SABBATH BREAKER.—(Verse 16.) The current religion of that time was legal and format. The Jewish people, because of their violation of the law (2 Kings, xylidis-20), were carried captive into foreign lands. There they repented and on their return sought to establish the law in all its original intent and purity. In doing this they went to an extreme, thinking that a mere conformity was all that was necessary. Hence, they carefully interpreted every commandment, and learned men devoted their time and talents to explain the various enactments. They were particularly strict in Sabbath observance, as that stood in the very mere to the decalogue (Ex. Xx.9-11), and was commended in many ways with promises. (fsc. 1941/12.) This cared man, carrying his bed in the streets of Jerusalicim on the Sabbath Day, attracted the attention of these legalists. They wholly overlooked the fact that the man so long helpless had been restored, and childed him as a Sabbath breaker. The carrying of a burden was not lawful.

UNKNOWN PHYSICIAN—(Verses 11, 12 and 13).—To this accusation there was but one defense, and that was quickly made. He was only obeying the command of him who had effected the cure. And that was defense enough. A man who had power to restore certainly had autority conserning an holy day. The right to regulate institutions is involved in the burden was set to grant such a privilege? The lews were determined to know, for the war shute of receptation. He had power to restore certainly had autority conserning an holy day. The right to regulate institutions is involved in the burden was get it. After speaking the could not give it. After speaking the authoritative word Jesus had immediately feathful to get a fire of the transgressor did not essay. One might have supposed tha
